CHIRIBIQUETE NATIONAL PARK AND ADJACENT EXPANSIONS

2017 Reserve Expansions

Reserve Expansions:
1,403,286 acres
567,890 ha
Expansions of Puerto Sábalo - Los Monos and Monochoa Indigenous Reserves

ACHIEVEMENTS

The expansion of the Puerto Sábalo - Los Monos and Monochoa indigenous reserves created one of the largest ecological and cultural conservation corridors in Colombia and the Amazon, connecting the country’s largest National Park with its largest indigenous reserve.

Chiribiquete + Puerto Sábalo - Los Monos Indigenous Reserve + Monochoa Indigenous Reserve + Predio Putumayo

23,831,641 ac.
An area the size of Virginia

It contributes to the conservation goals assumed by the National Government and helps prevent deforestation in Caquetá, the department with the highest rates of forest loss in the country.

Empowers and protects the indigenous peoples of the region:

40 CLANS
1423 INDIVIDUALS
332 FAMILIES
Threats

• Roads
• Cattle Ranching
• Dams
• Monoculture
• Gold Mining
• Logging
• Climate Change
AMAZON CONSERVATION TEAM’S CONSERVATION STRATEGY IN CHIRIBIQUETE

ACT is very grateful to the following major funders, whose generous support makes it possible for us to do our work: